New Year Finds City Very Busy

Industries Operate at Top Pace; Camps Cause Uncertainty

Circleville industry and business start into 1942 with a marked air of uncertainty prevailing, the war causing several industrialists to express conservatism when they mention prospects for the year.

The strife with the Axis Aryans—yellow and white—the possibility that Circleville may be in the center of two major Army improvements, the certainty of major tax increases, the shortage of certain raw materials, all add up to make the word "uncertain" an important one when industry and business pause to consider the New Year.

Several of Circleville's industries were enjoying holidays Thursday, although others were not. The Container Corporation, well supplied with orders, continued its work on an all-out schedule, employees working 24 hours each day in a seven day week.

Maize Mills, one of the city's fastest growing industries, ran its two shifts of eight hours each, despite the holiday. This plant, which makes a high grade polishing material used in munitions factories, would be working 24 hours daily instead of 16 if the supply of corn cobs, necessary to the industry, permitted such operation.

Only the soybean plant was operating at the Ralston-Purina Mill, other parts of the big factory being given a day off, and all of the John W. Eshelman and Sons employees were enjoying a day of rest. Both mills are doing a splendid business.

But, despite the business all the city's factories are enjoying, the most common answer to the question: "What about prospects in 1942?" was: "Suppose you tell me."

Camp Almost Certain

The possibility of Uncle Sam establishing a major Army cantonment in Pickaway and Ross Counties continues to hold attention as the New Year starts. There are few persons who doubt that the Army will get to work soon on a 46,000 acre layout in the two counties, and several developments in the last few days have strengthened the belief that actual construction may get under way sooner than many folk believe. Attorneys are being employed to work out land titles; offices for the lawyers have been set up in Chillicothe. Other offices for engineers who will be engaged at the cantonment site are being planned, with a possibility existing.

Charles A. Lindbergh

WITH the United States actually at war, the opinions of many former isolationists and pacifists have changed. Charles A. Lindbergh, until the attack on Pearl Harbor a leader of the isolationist forces, has volunteered his services to the army air corps for any duty for which his training has suited him. During the height of his verbal disagreement with President Roosevelt on foreign policy, Lindbergh resigned his commission as a colonel in the air corps. No action has been taken yet on his request for duty. Dr. Albert Einstein, famous German-Jewish scientist, now an American citizen, has announced that he has altered his former strongly pacifist views and now believes "we must strike hard and leave the breaking to the other sides."

10,000 NURSES NEEDED TO AID IN WAR EFFORT

CHICAGO, Jan. 1—Miss Ida Danielson, in charge of recruiting nurses for the 6th Corps Area, said today 10,000 nurses were needed immediately for service with the Army and that as many more probably would be needed within the year.

The Army's requirements will be filled from the ranks of registered nurses throughout the nation. The Illinois Nurses Association reported that a shortage of nurses already exists because of military needs.

COMMUNITY BEHAVES

Police and sheriff's officers reported New Year's quiet in both the city and the county. No arrests were made by either department.

Only 16 May Be Offered, However, For Passenger Vehicles; Ration Board Faces Difficult Task

First information concerning Pickaway County's quota of new tires and tubes for distribution during January was received Thursday when Price Administrator Leon Henderson announced in Washington that rationing boards would be permitted to issue purchasing certificates for 16 tires and 15 tubes for passenger cars, motorcycles and light trucks, and 56 tires and 47 tubes for trucks and buses.

Ohio was allotted 5,053 tires and 3,229 tubes in the passenger car classification and 11,925 tires and 9,969 tubes in the truck and bus class.

The quotas as announced by Henderson are designed to fulfill essential needs of owners of vehicles whose continued operation is required to maintain the public health and safety, buses with a capacity of 10 or more passengers, and necessary truck operations.

Henderson said in issuing the first rationing figures:

"We all should begin at once to conserve in the use of tires on passenger cars and other vehicles by doubling up and carrying our neighbors, by driving slowly to minimize tire wear, and by following the rules of good tire care."

Problem Remains

Announcement of the quotas leaves the Circleville Commodity Distribution board, a part of the Civilian Defense Council, with a problem still on its hands. This board is the only one set up in the county, so far as is known, but its functions cover Circleville alone. The quota of tires and tubes as announced by Henderson includes the entire county, and does not necessarily mean that all the quotas will be distributed in Circleville.

Leslie D. May is chairman of the Circleville committee which also lists Frank Turner, Clarence Helvering, W. E. Wallace, J. D. Mason, Donald Walker and John W. Eshelman.

The price administrator said Thursday that he believed the quotas adequate to maintain operation of vehicles in the eligible classes during January. The war situation will determine the quotas from that point on, he said, the amount of rubber available for the public being determined by the number of tires required by Uncle Sam for his armed forces.

Other Central Ohio counties received the following quotas: Franklin, 301 tires and 252 tubes for passenger cars and 892 tires (Continued on Page Three)

Actual amount of sugar needed for 1942 is 6,666,890 tons, the Agriculture Department said, which with the million-ton carryover from last year, would meet the nation's domestic and military requirements. Because of the war, the department did not anticipate that Hawaii or any of the Philippines would fill much of their quotas, therefore, it was necessary to raise quotas in other areas.

The OPM recently limited sugar distribution in this country to 6,891,000 tons (the amount distributed in 1940), plus supplies needed by the armed services.

NATION STARTS TO BOOST ITS SUGAR SUPPLIES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—The 1942 quotas for various sugar producing areas within the continental United States were raised to 8,032,074 tons today to assure the nation of sufficient sugar during the coming year.

Sugar distributed in the United States during 1941 totaled about 7,900,000 tons.

President Leads Nation In Seeking Divine Aid

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1—President Roosevelt leads the American people into the new year of 1942 today, amid grave portents from the Philippines, by seeking Divine aid to "endure sacrifices" and "achieve a victory of liberty and peace" in the gigantic struggle against axis aggression.

In the quietness of his own study, and probably again in public church services, the President will observe the "Day of Prayer," he set aside in public proclamation shortly after the Japanese hordes crashed into the American outposts in the Pacific.

Reports from Ottawa indicated British Prime Minister Winston Churchill will return to Washington during the day to join Mr. Roosevelt both in prayer and in further conferences on the grand strategy, designed to destroy Hitlerism and its satellites.

The New Year came to the United States—as to nearly every other nation—with its people engaged in a mighty war. It came darkly too, for Washington fully expects to hear shortly that the Japanese army of aggression has captured Manila.

Though the rest of the nation celebrated the first of January as a holiday, it was "business as usual" in Washington—except for special church services. The President set an example by scheduling a number of important conferences for the day and the rest.

Tacticians said there was no move Gen. MacArthur made from the board of Luzon Island even if any of these operations possible. Japanese triumph in the first major combined American-Filipino forces, and in men and machinery, may understand that will thwart Japan's northward movement toward the city.

Official Washington seemingly had no reaction, however, for the news of Nippon's entrance placed Philippines key city.

Reaction was based chiefly on the War Department's meager communiques. Manila was not directly in either of two issued yesterday.

Throughout the night were that its communications with the outside world had been severed.

MacArthur advised the War Department from his field headquarters that American and Filipino troops had readjusted their lines and were extracting a heavy toll of lives from the enemy as it increased pressure on all fronts.

This was interpreted to mean that the defense units had fallen back both in the north and south, but there was no confirmation of Tokyo reports that the invaders had advanced to within four miles of Manila.

SINGAPORE, Jan. 1—Jap air raids on Singapore during the night which caused minor damage and continued on the Perak front, where British forces yesterday took to the offensive, were announced by the British Eastern high command today.

A new war bulletin issued by the British Eastern high command said that on one sector of the Perak battle line in northwest Malaya a single British company aided by artillery fire killed or wounded 100 Japs and destroyed an ammunition dump.

The communiqué said: "On the Perak front there was contact with small parties of enemy forces. Some enemy shelling occurred."

"One British company supported by artillery inflicted 100 casualties and destroyed an ammunition dump."

"Fighting is continuing at Kuantan."

(Editor's Note: This sentence in the British communiqué seemingly disposed of a Jap claim that Nipponese forces have captured Kuantan on the eastern Malayan coast, 200 miles north of Singapore.)

WARFARE FAILS TO TAKE COLOR FROM NEW YEAR

Thousands Frolic In Major Cities; Many Factories Continue Operations

By International News Service
In spite of war, priorities and temporary military reverses, America welcomed 1942 with gaiety that rivaled or surpassed the celebrations of more normal times.

The knowledge that things are going to get tougher before they get better seemed to be an added stimulant and orders of the day read:

"There will always be a New Year's Eve."

It was a surface gaiety for behind the scenes, factories produced planes, tanks and guns on a 24-hour schedule in answer to aggressors everywhere.

New York and the east coast went all out in its celebration. Night clubs, hotels and restaurants were packed with merry-makers and Times Square was jammed with uncounted thousands.

The west coast hid its merry-making under cover. All public out-of-door celebrations were banned by official army edict.

Chicago and the midwest had little difficulty forgetting the problems of the future in favor of enjoying the immediate present.

Last night's din in New York was even greater than in other years. Bells and tin horns appeared in profusion and automobile horns added to the chorus. In deference to possible air raid warnings no factory whistles or sirens sounded.

500,000 There

1,200 OF STATE TEACHERS MEET IN CONVENTION

Circleville And Pickaway County Send Delegates To O. E. A. Sessions

MANY PROBLEMS VIEWED

Supply Of Instructors, Salaries Two Of Big Questions

Several Circleville and Pickaway County educators will be among the 1,200 public school teachers and administrators who gather in Columbus Friday and Saturday for the twentieth annual meeting of the Ohio Education Association.

J. L. Chilcote Jr. is Circleville's official delegate, while Samuel R. Johnson is the alternate. Superintendent Frank Fischer and Principal J. Wray Henry also plan to attend various sessions.

Pickaway County school delegates are Miss Helen Bowers of Ashville and A. Wendell Boyer of Williamsport. Carl Drum of South Bloomfield and Eugene Smith of Walnut Township are alternates.

Superintendent George D. McDowell said Thursday that he and numerous others of the county roster would be at one or more sessions.

Representative Assembly, delegate and policy committee of the O.E.A., will meet Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. at the Ohio Statehouse.

A letter from the Adjutant-General's office has informed him that "if a vacancy occurs in a position for which you are qualified by your past service and civilian occupation, you will be considered and offered a commission in appropriate grade in the United States Army."

The department recognizes the value of your previous military service and appreciates your willingness to once again take up the defense of the country."

Cross, 60, widely known as a farmer, lives near Johnson, Ohio, Fayette County, in poor condition in Mount Carmel hospital, Columbus, after being injured Tuesday afternoon when his wagon was struck by the automobile of Paul Mills, New Holland.

Cross, who formerly farmed land in Wayne Township, was riding on the New Holland road near the Jones road intersection when his wagon was struck.

Cross was hurled from the wagon and sustained a serious fracture at the base of the skull, and other injuries.

He was unconscious and after being cared for by Dr. L. L. Brock in Washington C. H. was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital.

Deputy Sheriff Otto Reno, of Fayette County, called to the scene in investigation, stated that there was every indication that Cross was driving on the right side of the road at the time the wagon was struck by the Mills car.

The horses were stopped near the scene of the accident. Both vehicles were heading east. Mills was accompanied by his sister, Pauline, and Doris Kimmey of New Holland. All escaped injury.

Reno appeared before Justice W. W. DeVries, Wednesday forenoon, and filed a reckless operation charge against Mills.

Mrs. F. D. R., LaGuardia At Odds Over Defense

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Fiorello LaGuardia will probably go down in history as the best mayor little Old New York has ever seen. Also he is still remembered in the House of Representatives for his far-sighted, peppery statesmanship. But as Administrator of Civilian Defense, the Little Flower, much as we love him, has been a flop.

This didn't matter so much as long as the country was still at peace. But now with blackouts, first aid training, bomb protection a very real thing, Civilian Defense becomes actually the second line of the nation's defense.

Fiorello still continues to want to boss the whole show, still cannot delegate authority, still has vigorous differences with Mrs. Roosevelt, even to the point of reaching into her division and firing two of her aides. This caused sparks to fly, and the irate First Lady has now rehired her assistants.

The differences between the Mayor and Mrs. R. illustrate some of the things which may be wrong with Civilian Defense.

BANDMASTER LA GUARDIA

Fiorello, in the first place, can't get out of the habit of thinking in terms of the bandmaster or theatrical producer. (His father was an army bandmaster.) He sees uniforms, fire hats, sensational rescues as movie material.

Mrs. Roosevelt, on the other hand, believes that civilian defense must be built from the ground up, from the poorer people who don't have the price of uniforms, the type of people who have been the backbone of civilian defense in England. She also sees the picture in terms of morale building, and long-range work even in communities where bombs may never fall.

This difference came out sharply when LaGuardia announced that Civilian Defenders would have smart, expensive uniforms designed by Hattie Carnegie. According to Mrs. Roosevelt's friends, he wanted the Defenders to be slim, slender females, smartly costumed, parading down Fifth Avenue, saluting him from the reviewing stand.

But Mrs. Roosevelt wanted the Civilian Defenders to be simple folk who would join for real service and who would wear a costume costing not more than three dollars.

WATCH PAUL McNUTT

One of the great troubles has been that LaGuardia necessarily has had to spend much of his time in New York, but meanwhile insists on passing on minute details. In fact, his office once had to fly up to New England to catch the Mayor and get his initials on some page proofs for a Civil Defense bulletin.

In order to ease LaGuardia to the sidelines, Roosevelt first offered the job to Wendell Willkie, has since been considering the appointment of a chief executive who would really do the job for the Little Flower. But more recently Roosevelt's friends have been urging a complete housecleaning, pointing out that he

HITLER AND NEGROES

After a trip through the south, Chip Robert, ex-secretary of the Democratic National Committee, is assuring friends that the Negroes are possibly more opposed to Hitler than the rest of the country.

As an illustration he cites, among other things, a conversation with an old servant in Atlanta, who said: "Mister Chip, I hear this man Hitler wants to send all the colored folks over to Africa."

"I guess he'd make it pretty bad for all of us, Auntie."

"Well I reckon we've all got to pitch in and win this here war. I'd be awful bad for us if Hitler came over here. ## 1,200 OF STATE TEACHERS MEET IN CONVENTION

Circleville And Pickaway County Send Delegates To O. E. A. Sessions

MANY PROBLEMS VIEWED

Supply Of Instructors, Salaries Two Of Big Questions

Several Circleville and Pickaway County educators will be among the 1,200 public school teachers and administrators who gather in Columbus Friday and Saturday for the twentieth annual meeting of the Ohio Education Association.

J. L. Chilcote Jr. is Circleville's official delegate, while Samuel R. Johnson is the alternate. Superintendent Frank Fischer and Principal J. Wray Henry also plan to attend various sessions.

Pickaway County school delegates are Miss Helen Bowers of Ashville and A. Wendell Boyer of Williamsport. Carl Drum of South Bloomfield and Eugene Smith of Walnut Township are alternates.

Superintendent George D. McDowell said Thursday that he and numerous others of the county roster would be at one or more sessions.

Representative Assembly, delegate and policy committee of the O.E.A., will meet Saturday session of official business.

Most of the sessions will be held in the afternoon. The most important sessions will be held in the afternoon.

Cady spent 24 years in serving for some time in the Philippines and the Far East.

Cross, 60, was seriously injured Tuesday afternoon when his wagon was struck by the automobile of Paul Mills, New Holland.

Cross, who formerly farmed land in Wayne township, was riding on the New Holland road near the Jones road intersection when his wagon was struck.

Cross was hurled from the wagon and sustained a serious fracture at the base of the skull, and other injuries.

He was unconscious and after being cared for by Dr. L. L. Brock in Washington C. H. was taken to Mt. Carmel Hospital.

Deputy Sheriff Otto Reno, of Fayette County, called to the scene in investigate, stated that there was every indication that Cross was driving on the right side of the road at the time the wagon was struck by the Mills car.

The horses were stopped near the scene of the accident. Both vehicles were heading east.

Mills was accompanied by his sister, Pauline, and Doris Kimmey of New Holland. All escaped injury.

Reno appeared before Justice W. W. DeWees, Wednesday forenoon, and filed a reckless operation charge against Mills.

MAYOR MAY BE CALLED BY U. S.

Cady's Experience Under Flag May Be Used To Good Advantage

Retiring Mayor W. B. Cady said Thursday that he had volunteered his services to the War Department should he be needed for Army duty.

A letter from the Adjutant-General's office has informed him that "if a vacancy occurs in a position for which you are qualified by your past service and civilian occupation, you will be considered and offered a commission in appropriate grade in the United States Army."

The War Department recognizes the value of your previous military service and appreciates your willingness to once again take up the defense of the country."

Cady spent 24 years in serving for some time in the Philippines and the Far East.

WARFARE FAILS TO TAKE COLOR FROM NEW YEAR

At the height of the din, Lucy Monroe mounted the steps of the Father Duffy statue in the center of the square and sang the "Star Spangled Banner." The jam-packed humanity that surrounded her swung out the chorus in a triumphant accompaniment.

Thousands of police and air raid wardens were on duty but their chief task was to keep the crowds moving. A uniformed fireman stood at every fire alarm call box in the mid-Manhattan area but was on duty only to prevent false fire alarms.

The war was not forgotten. In many bars the musicians played the National Anthem as a prelude to "Auld Lang Syne" at midnight, and a favorite toast was:

"Here's to 1942 and a good licking to the Japs and Nazis."

Chicago's tradition of unrestrained gaiety was tempered only by the fact that while thousands jammed the streets, hotels and night clubs, tooting horns and throwing confetti, many other thousands were hard at work in the vast workshops of the area struggling against time to produce the huge quantities of materials to defeat the axis powers.

While in Chicago's famous "loop," the sound of factory whistles chiming in at midnight to signal the advent of 1942 brought a fresh outburst of enthusiasm among the merry-makers, in the factories themselves the workers stopped only momentarily to cheer, then went on with their tasks.

Mills Light Skies

Throughout the night the big blast furnaces in the steel mills of South Chicago and Gary, Ind., lighted the skies, and new shifts of workers were on the job today, hoping to top the records for production they set during the Christmas holiday.

The situation was the same in the 65 or more plants in the North Chicago and Waukegan area where wire and steel specialties chiefly are manufactured.

In Joliet, Ill., the coke plant of the Carnegie Illinois Steel Company and three plants of the steel and wire company permitted no let-up during the night.

Factories throughout the state engaged in the production of ordnance or other defense materials maintained night and day shifts.

During the New Year's Eve celebration in Chicago one vendor of cheap horns had a narrow squeak. He was doing a big business when some of his customers discovered on the horns the imprint "made in Japan." They ground the horns under their feet and forced the vendor to flee.

EX-GOVERNOR OF LOUISIANA GOES TO U. S. PRISON

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 1—Richard W. Leche, former governor of Louisiana, today began serving a 10-year prison sentence in the Atlanta federal penitentiary in connection with mail frauds in 1937-38.

The former chief executive, one of four Louisiana state officials convicted in connection with mail fraud, was brought to Atlanta from Alexandria, La., by a U. S. marshal yesterday.

Leche was convicted on a charge of accepting several thousand dollars for more than $100,000 which the government charged Louisiana lost in purchase of trucks while he was governor.

PRESIDENT LEADS IN PRAYER DAY

of official Washington followed suit, with government departments operating as on any other weekday.

The War and Navy Departments manned full staffs, as did the Treasury, Commerce, Justice and Interior Departments. Most of the independent agencies, such as the Budget Bureau, Maritime Commission and Civil Aeronautics Authority, worked throughout the day.

It was the first time these government organizations were "open for business" on New Year's Day within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

In calling for a day of prayer, the President struck a keynote of "sacrifices" to come in the new year. This note was echoed from Capitol Hill and in government business circles. Congressional leaders forecast "major sacrifices" by all the American people would be necessary to reach the $50,000,000,000 war spending goal set by Mr. Roosevelt for the coming year.

250 PERSONS AT NEW YEAR RITES OF U. B. CHURCH

Several churches of the Pickaway County community held special New Year's Eve services Wednesday night.

At the District Youth Rally held at First United Brethren Church, there were more than 250 persons. The first service began at 7:45. Special music was provided by churches of the district.

The Rev. H. O. Thompson, pastor of the Chillicothe First United Brethren Church was the speaker.

Church to have the largest attendance at the rally and to receive the attendance banner was the Colerain Church with 105 young people present.

Other churches represented were the Morris Church, First Church of Chillicothe, Tyler Church of Chillicothe, and United Brethren churches of Ashville, East Ringgold, Pontius and Robtown.

Following the first service refreshments were served at the Community House and at 10:45 a Candle-Light Communion service was conducted in the church.

The Rev. A. N. Gruesser, pastor of the local church, was in charge of the program.

Next district meeting will be held the latter part of March.

Members of Circleville Pilgrim Church conducted a "Watch Night Service" Wednesday night beginning at 9 o'clock.

"It's easier to believe in democracy than in Democrats," says a friend. And a bystander comes right back with the information that it's easier to believe in a republic than in Republicans. But we have to make the best of things.

Courtney Burton, executive director of the State Defense Council, said Thursday that a tire rationing co-ordinator and a three member advisory committee will be appointed in each county in the state.

The county coordinator will have the responsibility of administering the tire rationing program for his particular county under the Ohio State Council for Defense.

MORE EVACUEES, WOUNDED REACH WESTERN CITIES

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1—Further grim reminders of Pearl Harbor ushered in the Pacific Coast's first wartime New Year today.

As they did on Christmas Day, new hundreds of victims of Japan's treachery in the Pacific arrived in San Francisco yesterday.

Many of the evacuees, brought by a convoy of which the details were kept secret, were wounded soldiers and sailors. Many others were wives and children of service men. A long motorcade of ambulances and civilian defense cars conveyed them from the waterfront to hospitals and other refuges.

Arrival of the additional victims of the Pacific attack lent a determined note to the coast's holiday alertness, and victory and retaliation were toasted along with the New Year.

From Alaska to Mexico, 1942 was welcomed in sober wartime style; with the imminent threat of air raids and submarine forays off the coast, it was far different from the west's last wartime New Year celebration 22 years ago, when the war was thousands of miles away.

The age-old holiday was done full justice at indoor celebrations in homes, night clubs, and elsewhere; the only missing notes were the traditional street celebrations and noise-making. Gatherings in the streets were banned by police in all big coast cities.

It will be fine for traffic safety when we all get those "war tires" that can't be driven more than 35 miles an hour, but a lot of drivers may blow up.

This is largely an oil war, with the Germans fighting and dying to get at the Caucasus oil fields and the Japs fighting and dying to get at the Dutch Indies oil. And why do they want that oil? Why, so they can use it to fight with.

THREE-LEGGED DOG
SACRAMENTO, Cal.—Three-legged "Crip," a Spitz puppy owned by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Birch of Roseville, is reported doing nicely despite being minus one leg. Crip was born in a litter of five to "Daisy" recently, and although her brothers and sisters were all normal, Crip was short one front leg. She doesn't seem to mind her affliction, however, and plays as any normal dog.

LIQUOR CONSUMPTION
SACRAMENTO, Cal.—Californians consumed 11,104,958 gallons of whisky, brandy, gin and other distilled spirits in 1940, which equals 1,421,434.624 one ounce glass drinks or 230 for each person in the state. Added to this, the State Board of Equalization pointed out, was the consumption of 76,274,249 gallons of beer, 20,070,940 gallons of still wine, and 181,129 gallons of sparkling wine.

Chicagoans are patting themselves on the back because thefts are decreasing in the city and there was only one hi-jacking in 1941.

CAPITAL WAITS FOR REPORT OF MANILA'S FALL

speculated on Philippine defense tactics should the city fall. Many believed that the American-Filipino troops would withdraw to the area of Manila Bay and continue the battle from the fortresses and strongholds in that area.

Experts conjectured that MacArthur, on the other hand, chose to retire his troops in the swampy sector lying northeastward from Manila, and in that densely wooded area carry on a guerrilla operation that could deprive the enemy of victory. Others believed the defenders may move their front into the mountainous terrain northwest of Manila to stand off assault with the help of rugged terrain.

Consensus was that the Manila Bay area, where stout Corregidor lies, probably would offer the best defensive position should the Japs take Manila.

Other Forts Strong
Fort Mills, on Corregidor Island, and Forts Hughes and Drum are considered impregnable from the sea. They recently weathered a rain of Japanese aerial bombs satisfactorily, experts said.

The nation's capital generally admitted that the Philippine war picture is nothing less than grim, but at the same time hastened to point out that MacArthur's command is but a small portion of the gigantic army America is building for further and more significant operations against Japan and its axis partners.

The Navy, meanwhile, made clear it would not "indulge in the common enemy practice" of estimating losses, but would report them only when fully substantiated. The Navy also asserted that Old Glory, just as it waves over MacArthur's men in the Philippines, still is at full mast over the Maui, Johnston and Palmyra Islands.

NEW YEAR FINDS CITY VERY BUSY

ing that Circleville may be the center to be used by the engineering outfit.

The location which takes in parts of several Pickaway County townships has already been placed on a tentative list and more definite word concerning assignment of the camp will be heard just as soon as Congress authorizes new cantonments to handle the nation's ever-growing Army.

Work has already started in Franklin County on a gigantic air base which will cost anywhere from $7,500,000 to $12,000,000. While this base does not penetrate into Pickaway County, residents of the northern edge of the county believe that the base may eventually be extended into Madison Township.

To House 4,500
This base will see 4,500 men housed for training as bomber crews.

Runways are already being marked off, and indications are that the general contract for the air base will be let within a month or two.

So, generally speaking, 1942 starts with a rather uncertain air prevailing.

HEROIC NAVAL AVIATORS SAVE NINE FROM SEA

HONOLULU, Jan. 1 — Nine United States Army airmen were safe today after floating four days in two small rubber lifeboats on heavy seas—thanks to the heroism of two Navy fliers who risked alighting on the tossing waves to save them.

The rescue was carried out by Ensign P. M. Flier, 23, of Ivanhoe, N. C., and his co-pilot, Machinist's Mate Leonard M. Wagoner of Bakersville, N. C. Both were decorated with the Navy Cross for heroism.

The Army fliers had been forced down at sea and had nearly given up hope of being saved when aid came. The seas were so rough that one of their little lifeboats capsized, losing its provisions.

They were First Lt. Earl J. Cooper, 24, Stevens Point, Wis.; Second Lt. R. J. Eberenz, 24, Louisville, Ky.; Second Lt. J. A. Crockett, 23; Stephens, Ark.; Second Lt. Joaquin Castro, 25, Mission, Tex.; Second Lt. J. V. Buchanan, 26, Holly Springs, Miss.; Sgt. J. R. Browles, 23, San Antonio, Tex.; Sgt. Lee Best, 24, Wendell, Idaho; Cpl. M. L. Lucas, 22, Fortuna, Cal.; Pvt. D. C. McCord Jr., 28, St. Louis, Mo.

The Army airmen drifted in the rough water hundreds of miles from Oahu.

Despairing of aid, they fired Verey pistol flares which were sighted just at dusk by Flier, who was flying a Navy patrol bomber.

Because of the heavy seas, the prospect of alighting on the water to rescue the men seemed next to impossible, but Flier courageously and skillfully put his ship down on the water. The marooned men were brought aboard and a successful take-off was accomplished.

Lt. Cooper gave unstinted praise to the Navy crew. He said: "Their action was nothing less than heroic. In seas 40 feet by they took a tremendous risk."

walk west, do not run," were ignored.

At the height of the din, Lucy Monroe mounted the steps of the Father Duffy statue in the center of the square and sang the "Star Spangled Banner." The jam-packed humanity that surrounded her swung out the chorus in a triumphant accompaniment.

Thousands of police and air raid wardens were on duty but their chief task was to keep the crowds moving. A uniformed fireman stood at every fire alarm call box in the mid-Manhattan area but was on duty only to prevent false fire alarms.

The war was not forgotten. In many bars the musicians played the National Anthem as a prelude to "Auld Lang Syne" at midnight, and a favorite toast was:

"Here's to 1942 and a good licking to the Japs and Nazis."

Chicago's tradition of unrestrained gaiety was tempered only by the fact that while thousands jammed the streets, hotels and night clubs, tooting horns and throwing confetti, many other thousands were hard at work in the vast workshops of the area struggling against time to produce the huge quantities of materials to defeat the axis powers.

While in Chicago's famous "loop," the sound of factory whistles chiming in at midnight to signal the advent of 1942 brought a fresh outburst of enthusiasm among the merry-makers, in the factories themselves the workers stopped only momentarily to cheer, then went on with their tasks.

Mills Light Skies

Throughout the night the big blast furnaces in the steel mills of South Chicago and Gary, Ind., lighted the skies, and new shifts of workers were on the job today, hoping to top the records for production they set during the Christmas holiday.

The situation was the same in the 65 or more plants in the North Chicago and Waukegan area where wire and steel specialties chiefly are manufactured.

In Joliet, Ill., the coke plant of the Carnegie Illinois Steel Company and three plants of the steel and wire company permitted no let-up during 't's night.

Factories throughout the state engaged in the production of ordnance or other defense materials maintained night and day shifts.

During the New Year's Eve celebration in Chicago one vendor of cheap horns had a narrow squeak. He was doing a big business when some of his customers discovered on the horns the imprint "made in Japan." They ground the horns under their feet and forced the vendor to flee.

EX-GOVERNOR OF LOUISIANA GOES TO U. S. PRISON

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 1—Richard W. Leche, former governor of Louisiana, today began serving a 10-year prison sentence in the Atlanta federal penitentiary in connection with mail frauds in 1937-38.

The former chief executive, one of four Louisiana state officials convicted in connection with mail fraud, was brought to Atlanta from Alexandria, La., by a U. S. marshal yesterday.

Leche was convicted on a charge of accepting several thousand dollars for more than $100,000 which the government charged Louisiana lost in purchase of trucks while he was governor.

of official Washington followed suit, with government departments operating as on any other weekday.

The War and Navy Departments manned full staffs, as did the Treasury, Commerce, Justice and Interior Departments. Most of the independent agencies, such as the Budget Bureau, Maritime Commission and Civil Aeronautics Authority, worked throughout the day.

It was the first time these government organizations were "open for business" on New Year's Day within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

In calling for a day of prayer, the President struck a keynote of "sacrifices" to come in the new year. This note was echoed from Capitol Hill and in government business circles. Congressional leaders forecast "major sacrifices" by all the American people would be necessary to reach the $50,000,000,000 war spending goal set by Mr. Roosevelt for the coming year.

250 PERSONS AT NEW YEAR RITES OF U. B. CHURCH

Several churches of the Pickaway County community held special New Year's Eve services Wednesday night.

At the District Youth Rally held at First United Brethren Church, there were more than 250 persons. The first service began at 7:45. Special music was provided by churches of the district.

The Rev. H. O. Thompson, pastor of the Chillicothe First United Brethren Church was the speaker.

Church to have the largest attendance at the rally and to receive the attendance banner was the Colerain Church with 105 young people present.

Other churches represented were the Morris Church, First Church of Chillicothe, Tyler Church of Chillicothe, and United Brethren churches of Ashville, East Ringgold, Pontius and Robtown.

Following the first service refreshments were served at the Community House and at 10:45 a Candle-Light Communion service was conducted in the church.

The Rev. A. N. Gruener, pastor of the local church, was in charge of the program.

Next district meeting will be held the latter part of March.

Members of Circleville Pilgrim Church conducted a "Watch Night Service" Wednesday night beginning at 9 o'clock.

Courtney Burton, executive director of the State Defense Council said Thursday that a tire rationing co-ordinator and a three member advisory committee will be appointed in each county in the state.

The county coordinator will have the responsibility of administering the tire rationing program for his particular county under the Ohio State Council for Defense.

Pointing out that the program will become operative January 5, Burton said the federal government in the administration of this program will deal with local boards and committees only through the State Defense Council and the tire rationing administrator.

He estimated that the consumption of new tires for civilian use will be reduced about 80 percent.

MOSCOW—Red army forces that battered their way through Nazi defenses to recapture the important railway center of Kaluga, 110 miles southwest of Moscow, smashed five German army corps, the Russian high command announced today. Bastions of the Fourth German army of Gen. Von Kluge were broken at many points, a special communique said.

LONDON—Britain's capital, free of air raiders for eight months, ushered in the New Year gaily today. Large hotels reported three times as many revellers as last year and "pubs" and night clubs were crowded despite a shortage and at some spots a complete lack of strong drinks.

ROME (By Official Wireless)—The Italian high command today claimed destruction of 48 British armored cars in fighting south of Agedabia in Libya and said that British attacks in the Sollum and Bardia areas were repulsed.

BATAVIA—Japanese airplanes attacked and set afire an American freighter in the northern part of the East Indies archipelago, the Netherlands East Indies high command announced today.

BERLIN (By Official German Wireless)—Heavy German air attacks on Soviet forces in the Crimea and their lines of communication across the Black Sea were announced today in a German war communique which claimed the Russians suffered "considerable losses in men and material."

She doesn't seem to mind her affliction, however, and plays as any normal dog.

This is largely an oil war, with the Germans fighting and dying to get at the Caucasus oil fields and the Japs fighting and dying to get at the Dutch Indies oil. Why do they want that oil? Why, so they can use it to fight with.

speculated on Philippine defense tactics should the city fall.

Many believed that the American-Filipino troops would withdraw to the area of Manila Bay and continue the battle from the fortresses and strongholds in that area.

Experts conjectured that MacArthur, on the other hand, chose to retire his troops in the swampy sector lying northeastward from Manila, and in that densely wooded area carry on a guerrilla operation that could deprive the enemy of victory. Others believed the defenders may move their front into the mountainous terrain northwest of Manila to stand off assault with the help of rugged terrain.

Consensus was that the Manila Bay area, where stout Corregidor lies, probably would offer the best defensive position should the Japs take Manila.

Other Forts Strong
Fort Mills, on Corregidor Island, and Forts Hughes and Drum are considered impregnable from the sea. They recently weathered a rain of Japanese aerial bombs satisfactorily, experts said.

The nation's capital generally admitted that the Philippine war picture is nothing less than grim, but at the same time hastened to point out that MacArthur's command is but a small portion of the gigantic army America is building for further and more significant operations against Japan and its axis partners.

The Navy, meanwhile, made clear it would not "indulge in the common enemy practice" of estimating losses, but would report them only when fully substantiated. The Navy also asserted that Old Glory, just as it waves over MacArthur's men in the Philippines, still is at full mast over the Maui, Johnston and Palmyra Islands.

ing that Circleville may be the center to be used by the engineering outfit.

The location which takes in parts of several Pickaway County townships has already been placed on a tentative list and more definite work concerning assignment of the camp will be heard just as soon as Congress authorizes new cantonments to handle the nation's ever-growing Army.

Work has already started in Franklin County on a gigantic air base which will cost anywhere from $7,500,000 to $12,000,000. While this base does not penetrate into Pickaway County, residents of the northern edge of the county believe that the base may eventually be extended into Madison Township.

To House 4,500
This base will see 4,500 men housed for training as bomber crews.

Runways are already being marked off, and indications are that the general contract for the air base will be let within a month or two.

So, generally speaking, 1942 starts with a rather uncertain air prevailing.

LIQUOR CONSUMPTION
SACRAMENTO, Cal.—Californians consumed 11,104,958 gallons of whiskey, brandy, gin and other distilled spirits in 1940, which equals 1421.434.624 one ounce glass drinks or 230 for each person in the state. Added to this, the State Board of Equalization pointed out, was the consumption of 76,274,249 gallons of beer, 29,070,940 gallons of still wine, and 181,129 gallons of sparkling wine.

Chicagoans are patting themselves on the back, because thefts are decreasing in the city and there was only one hi-jacking in 1941.

UNCHANGING PRINCIPLES

A NEW Year comes—with a big question mark. What will it bring to the world? What will those who live it see, do, suffer, achieve?

All the signs, and all their interpreters, point to inevitable changes, hardship, readjustments in every phase of American life—industry, agriculture, education, business, domestic habits. These forecasts are held to be true whether the war goes on or comes to an unexpectedly early end.

Some people are alarmed at the thought of change. Others, not fearful, are yet aware that the process may be extremely unpleasant. They are fortifying themselves, with as much foresight and wisdom as possible, to meet hard blows if they come and to do whatever task they are assigned to the best of their ability.

In all this foreboding of change and uncertainty of what precisely the change may be, one thing stands firm and reassuring. A free and honest nation, even under the most tragic circumstances, need not change its faith and fundamental principles.

Thus, whatever 1942 holds for us in battles lost or won, it should find us stronger in our understanding of freedom and more convinced that it is a heritage worth fighting for.

LOOKING UP

THERE are really some good things about the defensive blackouts, when people once get themselves adjusted to the idea. The children, at least, get a big kick out of it. Many an honest grown-up, too, confesses to a patriotic thrill. It peeps up patriotism and makes current history seem real.

But along with the foregoing indoor efforts there are natural experiences and variations not to be ignored. In a black-out many people get a good look at the stars, perhaps the first they've had in years. And when you get right down to, or up to it, there's really a good deal to be said for stars.

It's very calm away up there, and the way those stars twinkle and sparkle, while the sky they're set in wheels around slowly and silently, not at all disturbed by what's going on down here below—well, it does something to you. Most people, perhaps, would rather be in underground shelters when there's a raid threatened, but many feel safer outside looking up than inside looking down.

Who's yammering about war costs? Walter Winchell has given a day's pay to the government.

They don't "roll out the barrel" now; they roll out the bomber.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to the last day of the year, and the doddering old blunderer's passing caused me little if any regret. Only one major accomplishment for him that I can see, unification of the American people in defense of common liberty of speech, thought and action.

In comes the little fellow, but with promises only of tears, blood and sacrifice, but he is honest about it. We know what to expect; something we did not know when 1941 arrived. Well, we will do our best, that is certain, and our best is enough to assure success in national undertakings.

How about Defense Bonds? Buying any? Probably you are, and that is good. Those newsboys of mine are doing a grand job of selling them. Already three of them have won medals offered by Uncle Sam for meritorious work. And will they wear them with pride. You can say that again. One boy of about 15 did such a swell job of selling that he sold himself. Withdrew his savings account and bought a $100 bond. Also is buying two quarter stamps a week. Those youngsters will take your stamp or bond orders and will deliver them.

Into the office came Donald Mancin, age 8. "How about those Defense Stamps?" he asked as he jingled a pocketful of money. Had two nickels and 71 pennies, and eight dime stamps were counted out and placed in a book bearing his name. "Me and my sister emptied our bank to buy these stamps," the boy declared with a proud smile. "Another thing I want to know," he said, "is that $18.75 bomb. When do I get that, just as soon as I have $18.75 in stamps?" I explained that he did not get a bomb, but a bond, and that the bond was a government certificate of debt to him. "Not a bomb?" said the kid. "You mean I don't get a bomb? I didn't expect one that would blow everything to pieces, but I thought I would at least get a blank for my $18.75." The boy felt much better about the whole thing when it was explained that his money would go into the purchase of a real explosive bomb that would be dropped on the neck of the Japs. "That's okeh," he declared, "but I would like to drop it myself if it belongs to me."

On through the day with nothing particularly exciting happening, and in the late afternoon headed for home. Downtown in the early evening to pick up some mail and drink a bottle of Coca Cola, and then back home where was greeted with ice cream and popcorn, of which I did, as usual, eat entirely too much. Drank a toast to the New Year in a great beaker of milk and shortly after his arrival did turn toward bed wondering just what the next twelve months have in store for us. We don't know, of course, but whatever is offered we can take with our chins up.

To each and every one of you: Good health, good luck and a reasonable degree of happiness for 1942.

WASHINGTON—Senator Burt Wheeler doesn't know it, but he was paid a high tribute by Winston Churchill.

After his speech at the joint session of Congress, the British Prime Minister shook hands with Congressmen as they filed past him. To Senators Clark, Nye and LaFollette, Churchill was courteous but made no special comment.

But when Wheeler was presented, Churchill stopped him, shook his hand warmly and said, "This is a genuine pleasure to me, sir. I've long wanted to meet you. This is one of the pleasantest moments of this very happy occasion."

Smiling broadly, Wheeler thanked Churchill cordially and moved on. Later during the Congressional luncheon at which Wheeler was not present, the Prime Minister again referred to his delight in meeting the Montana senator.

"I liked him," Churchill said. "He is a fighting man. I have been in 14 political fights, won eight and lost six. Once I was beaten three times in 18 months. I respect and admire fighting men even if they are against me."

"In these troubled times we should welcome good fighters, regardless of the differences of the past. After the war broke out some of my friends wanted to go after Chamberlain and his group, who had tried to appease the Nazis. They called them Munichers. I had opposed this group as violently as anyone in Britain, but I was against any reprisals. I told my friends that the Chamberlain group had tried to do their duty in the best light they saw it and that now there was a job to be done fighting the Nazis, not one another."

"I told them that when the present fights with the past, the future is hopeless."

CHURCHILLANIA

Churchill ate heartily of turkey, stuffing, cranberry sauce and mashed potatoes at his luncheon with congressional leaders, remarked on the excellence of the cheese served with the apple pie dessert. It was a snappy cheese, made in Wisconsin. . . . While receiving the congratulations of senators and representatives following his speech, Churchill suddenly inquired, "Where's Senator Carter Glass?" Told that the 83-year-old Virginian had been unavoidably detained, Churchill said, "Oh, I'm sorry. I hoped very much to have the pleasure of meeting him." . . . Most nervous man in the Senate during Churchill's speech was Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, who seemed worried about his chief. . . . Calmest man was Russian Ambassador Litvinoff, who sat in the same row with Halifax, three seats away. . . . Litvinoff came out of his shell and applauded vigorously when Churchill spoke of the valiant fight of the Chinese against the Japanese. He also grinned broadly when the Prime Minister ridiculed Mussolini.

Doctor Makes New Year Diagnosis of World

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● "Happy New Year! Yes, indeed, let's wish each other a happy new year," was my old friend Dr. Adrian Gibbs' greeting to me this morning.

"I wish you a happy new year, but we are not going to get a Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

happy new year in this world just by wishing.

"It may not be news to you, but we are facing a crisis.

"You know, a doctor learns a good deal about crises. I have been in on a lot of human crises and I always found that if the crisis was going to be solved, somebody had to do some cold, calculating thinking. It doesn't do any good to get worked up and turn on a lot of hope! The sister in the corner who is sitting with clenched hands, with the tears running down her cheeks, is not helping at all.

Hate Doesn't Help

"And it doesn't do any good to hate. Father and brother out in the kitchen who are cursing out the Germans that the sick man has, or telling what they think of the truck driver who knocked him down on the icy sidewalk are no good either. That's all over. Hate won't do it.

"Nor will a false sense of activity! The member of the household who runs around and gets the hot water bags, the consultant who always wants to give a hypodermic, the aunt's suggestion that we call Dr. Soandso from Poughkeepsie who once had a case like this—they are just making a diversion, not doing anything constructive.

"No! Somebody, and it's usually the family doctor, has to sit down quietly and figure out just what is amiss with nature and how it can be adjusted to allow a return to normalcy. Somebody has to think.

Genius Needed

"I had a director of civilian defense in the Department of Hygiene ask me to make suggestions to improve the health of the nation in this crisis. I said, 'Sir, George Washington had false teeth; Napoleon had ulcer of the stomach; Julius Caesar had epilepsy; Ulysses S. Grant was an alcoholic; Charles XII had tuberculosis; Horatio Nelson had one eye, and Robert E. Lee was deaf in one ear. What this country needs is a genius—never mind whether he can pass a life insurance examination.

"What that genius must do is quite a job. He must realize that all the peoples of the modern world are now bound inseparably in an economic union, and that union must be equitably managed, and no one nation—which means England as well as Germany—can be allowed to dominate the management.

"I think, my silver-haired friend—

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, January 1

THIS DAY, although the beginning of the "new leaf" and its fragile resolution, will be notable for a general state of slowing down processes, with perhaps a tendency to retrospect, depression and reactions after the high tension of the previous three days. However, if this sense of introspection and inertia can be definitely shaken off, there is promise of stirring up some worthwhile activities and beneficial contacts that may have enduring values. Friendly and domestic sociability survive and give happiness.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for some substantial opportunities during the year, with certain lively issues, perhaps involving change travel, new contacts. While not of major importance, these will possess the virtue of stability, endurance and future security. Domestic and home interests probably will feel this sense of soundness, and wise efforts are due for enduring material rewards.

A child born on this day will have much sturdiness of character, stability and practical talents, which should be sure of recognition and due rewards.

No Refuge from Love

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION JERRY BRONDFIELD

SYNOPSIS

MOLLA GLENDON comes to New York, seeking refuge from the war that has swept across her native Norway, and from the bombs that shattered London, where she had fled from Oslo. She is to work for

BURTON WHITWORTH, an old friend of her deceased father. Burton tells her son,

TAYLOR WHITWORTH, to bring Molla to the family home for dinner.

YESTERDAY: Tay looks forward with no pleasure to his "task" of meeting Molla.

CHAPTER TWO

TAY WHITWORTH stopped at the office switchboard. "Ring Neil Lundquist, will you, and tell him I'm ready to go to lunch if he is. I'll be in my office."

Five minutes later Neil Lundquist came in. He was tall, powerfully built and blond. There was something ruggedly handsome about him, something rough and shaggy that made one take a second look and find it pleasing.

Neil Lundquist was a Whitworth field engineer, and a good one but, as far as he was concerned, he preferred to remain in the field. His trips to New York for consultation were as infrequent as he could possibly make them.

"Where to today?" he asked Tay.

"Something different. Show you a little more of our cosmopolitan big town. Very colorful, too." Tay rattled on. "We're going down to the open-air skating rink at Rockefeller Plaza. There's a glass-enclosed restaurant there and you can watch folks skate as you eat. You'll like it, and it's only a block from here."

"Say, this is kind of all right," Neil admitted a short while later. "But how can I concentrate on this bouillon royal, or whatever the stuff is, with all those people skimming past? What is this—the floor show?"

Tay laughed. "I enjoy it. I come here a couple of times each week. Ever skate, Neil?"

"Some . . . up in Minnesota," Neil murmured. But he was looking past Tay, out the sweeping glass window which fronted directly on the rink side.

"There," he nodded, "is what I would call a really fine skater."

Directly in front of them, coming out of a graceful spread-eagle, was a girl in a flared blue skirt and a white form-fitting sweater. Her bare legs flashed through a spray of flying ice. Her golden hair, free in the wind, glinted in the sunlight as she completed the maneuver with a short spin.

Tay stared for a full minute as she swept by and continued in a long glide out toward the center of the ice.

"I said slowly 'there's nothing ever like this. She's—she's, well, Neil," he said slowly, "she's a real old man, you can admire her skating, but let me rave about the skater. She's gorgeous—she's—"

Connecticut. She must remember

He paused. "I've got to meet that girl."

"Sure—just go out and ask her for the next skate," Neil said. "I ought to work with your native charm."

"I'm not joking. I've GOT to find out her name. My curiosity is aroused."

"Looks like someone else is beating you to it," Neil observed dryly, nodding again in her direction.

Tay looked. A short, roly-poly man had come out to the rink and approached the girl with the golden hair. They saw the man talk to her for a couple of moments and then take a card out of his wallet.

He gave the card to the girl, tipped his hat and walked away.

"I've seen that gent around before," Tay observed, but I'm not sure where. Anyway," he continued, "I'm going to stop down here again and again, and maybe again, if necessary, until she shows up."

"And then what?" Neil inquired.

"Why, I'll just go right up to her and ask her what her name is."

"Why don't you do that right now?"

Tay looked surprised. "I never thought of that. Guess I'm not very bright, am I?" He stood up, but when they looked out the girl had gone.

"Someone ought to kick me where a kick usually does the most good," Tay said disgustedly.

"I'd be delighted if you'd just wait until we're through with lunch, or will the opportunity be lost by them?"

"Don't talk about opportunities. One just knocked with a compressed air hammer, but I didn't hear it."

"Say, don't tell me you're looking about for another affaire d'amour. I thought you already had your quota for the season."

"Hey, you're crazy," Tay protested. "I haven't—"

Neil held up a hand. "Never mind—I know the routine," he grinned.

Molla dressed slowly and carefully, yet she wanted to be ready on time. Mr. Whitworth had told her his son would pick her up at 5:30. She looked at her watch. She had an hour.

Would Mr. Whitworth's son be tall, she mused, or short? Would he be light or dark? Would he be handsome or—but of course, he would be handsome. She had noticed that about Americans almost immediately.

Molla peered intently into the mirror as she dabbed powder on her nose. Well, she was part American, too. She was very proud of her father. Her mother, too, of course, but she was glad her father had come from—how did they pronounce it again? Oh, yes—Connecticut. She must remember

Primmer and Dr. C. T. Grattidge. If the weather conditions are agreeable the boys have planned a hike Saturday, at which time some of the new members may take their cooking test.

Gwendolyn Dent was hostess to a euche party at her home Saturday night.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Whisler, Mr. and Mrs. Winifred Dumm, Jane Wolliver, June Armstrong, Dorothy Kholer, Malcolm Shupe, Howard Egan, Mervin McClelland and Hugh Poling.

Dorothy Kholer and Hugh Poling won high score. Mr. and Mrs. Winifred Dumm low score.

Refreshments were served by hostess at a late hour.

The Community Club met Monday night at the home of Tressa Haynes and Della Martin. Officers elected for the year were, President, Zola Chilcote, vice president, Mae Archer; Secretary, Dolly Durant, and Treasurer, Emma Armstrong.

They donated $5 to the Red Cross.

Two new members, Mrs. Bertha Egan and Mrs. Kathryn Whisler, joined the society.

Thirteen members and three visitors, Maude Mettler, Frances Stone of Cedar Hill and Stella Wills were present. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Miss Virginia Brightwell, local high school teacher, handed her resignation to the Laurelville-Perry Board of Education at its last meeting.

The local board has received one application for position.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Wiggins and children, Sammy and Judy, returned home Thursday from Vincennes, Indiana where he had been working for the Anderson Brothers.

Lila Jean Hedges of Columbus returned home Sunday after spending a few days with Dolores Cryder.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Stone and daughter Ruth Ellen of Chester not to sound that second 'C'. Not Con-EC-ticut.

She slipped into a French blue wool dress, set off by a garnet clip at the neckline. She hoped they would like it. Her wardrobe was limited. In fact, she had been lucky, as it was, to escape from Norway with as much as she did. No, she wasn't going to worry much about something as unimportant as a dress.

When she was through dressing she sat down and tried to read. She felt nervous, waiting for the people who were giving her a fresh start in life. Over and over again she vowed she would make them like her.

The telephone rang and it startled her. "Hello," she said.

"The voice on the other end was pleasant and light. 'Hello,' it replied. 'This is Taylor Whitworth. Are you Molla Glendon?'"

"Yes," she said, "and—"

"Well, I'm awfully sorry, but do you mind if I keep you waiting another 20 minutes. I discovered my car had a flat tire when I went to pick it up at the garage. I'll be around as quickly as possible."

"That will be perfectly all right," she said and he hung up.

Anti-climax, she thought. More waiting. More nervousness. Somehow this wasn't quite fair.

The 20 minutes seemed like an hour, and then the phone rang again.

"I'm down in the lobby," Taylor Whitworth told her. "Coming down or should I come up? Maybe I'd better come up, because how will who recognize who down here? Okay with you? Here I come."

"Why—why, I'm—"

But he had hung up.

Two minutes later there was the knock at her door.

She opened it and smiled into the face of the tall young man before her.

She held out her hand, slightly hesitant. "I'm Molla," she said, "and I'm sorry to cause you all this trouble."

Tay Whitworth looked at her and blinked. "You—you're Molla—"

He looked at her hard and drew in his breath. He couldn't be mistaken. Molla Glendon was the girl he and Neil had seen skating at Rockefeller Plaza earlier in the day. Wait till Neil sees her, he thought.

"And I said you had two left feet," he mumbled queerly. "She cocked her head quizzically. 'What was that?'"

"Never mind . . . let's go," he said excitedly. "We've got to start getting acquainted."

"I hope that doesn't take too long," Molla said, and then felt herself blush. "I don't mean that, I mean—"

"I don't care what you mean," he grinned, "but you've got a good idea there. Hallalujah, this is my lucky day!"

UNCHANGING PRINCIPLES

A NEW Year comes—with a great big question mark. What will it bring to the world? What will those who live it see, do, suffer, achieve?
All the signs, and all their interpreters, point to inevitable changes, hardship, readjustments in every phase of American life—industry, agriculture, education, business, domestic habits. These forecasts are held to be true whether the war goes on or comes to an unexpectedly early end.
Some people are alarmed at the thought of change. Others, not fearful, are yet aware that the process may be extremely unpleasant. They are fortifying themselves, with as much foresight and wisdom as possible, to meet hard blows if they come and to do whatever task they are assigned to the best of their ability.
In all this foreboding of change and uncertainty of what precisely the change may be, one thing stands firm and reassuring. A free and honest nation, even under the most tragic circumstances, need not change its faith and fundamental principles.
Thus, whatever 1942 holds for us in battles lost or won, it should find us stronger in our understanding of freedom and more convinced that it is a heritage worth fighting for.

LOOKING UP

THERE are really some good things about the defensive blackouts, when people once get themselves adjusted to the idea. The children, at least, get a big kick out of it. Many an honest grown-up, too, confesses to a patriotic thrill. It peeps up patriotism and makes current history seem real.
But along with the foregoing indoor efforts there are natural experiences and variations not to be ignored. In a black-out many people get a good look at the stars, perhaps the first they've had in years. And when you get right down to, or up to it, there's really a good deal to be said for stars.
It's very calm away up there, and the way those stars twinkle and sparkle, while the sky they're set in wheels around slowly and silently, not at all disturbed by what's going on down here below—well, it does something to you. Most people, perhaps, would rather be in underground shelters when there's a raid threatened, but many feel safer outside looking up than inside looking down.
Who's yammering about war costs? Walter Winchell has given a day's pay to the government.
They don't "roll out the barrel" now; they roll out the bomber.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE ..... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:
Up to the last day of the year, and the doddering old blunderer's passing caused me little if any regret. Only one major accomplishment for him that I can see, unification of the American people in defense of common liberty of speech, thought and action.
In comes the little fellow, but with promises only of tears, blood and sacrifice, but he is honest about it. We know what to expect; something we did not know when 1941 arrived. Well, we will do our best, that is certain, and our best is enough to assure success in national undertakings.
How about Defense Bonds? Buying any? Probably you are, and that is good. Those newsboys of mine are doing a grand job of selling them. Already three of them have won medals offered by Uncle Sam for meritorious work. And will they wear them with pride. You can say that again. One boy of about 15 did such a swell job of selling that he sold himself. Withdrew his savings account, and bought a $100 bond. Also is buying two quarter stamps a week. Those youngsters will take your stamp or bond orders and will deliver them.

Into the office came Donald March, age 8. "How about those Defense Stamps?" he asked as he jingled a pocketful of money. Had two nickels and 71 pennies, and eight dime stamps were counted out and placed in a book bearing his name. "Me and my sister emptied our bank to buy these stamps," the boy declared with a proud smile. "Another thing I want to know," he said, "is that $18.75 bomb. When do I get that, just as soon as I have $18.75 in stamps?" I explained that he did not get a bomb, but a bond, and that the bond was a government certificate of debt to him. "Not a bomb?" said the kid. "You mean I don't get a bomb? I didn't expect one that would blow everything to pieces, but I thought I would at least get a blank for my $18.75." The boy felt much better about the whole thing when it was explained that his money would go into the purchase of a real explosive bomb that would be dropped on the neck of the Japs. "That's okeh," he declared, "but I would like to drop it myself if it belongs to me."

On through the day with nothing particularly exciting happening, and in the late afternoon headed for home. Downtown in the early evening to pick up some mail and drink a bottle of Coca Cola, and then back home where was greeted with ice cream and popcorn, of which I did, as usual, eat entirely too much. Drank a toast to the New Year in a great beaker of milk and shortly after his arrival did turn toward bed wondering just what the next twelve months have in store for us. We don't know, of course, but whatever is offered we can take with our chins up.
.....
To each and every one of you: Good health, good luck and a reasonable degree of happiness for 1942.

1. What is the meaning of the naval expression, "screening"?
2. What is meant by "field day" on board a warship?
3. What is meant by the term "fire control" in the navy?
Words of Wisdom
The best lightning rod for your protection is your own spine.—Emerson
Hints on Etiquette
Two young people who travel to school or work on the same bus or train may walk to and from the vehicle and their homes together. The girl should pay her own fare, however. She should have it ready and pay it inconspicuously herself.
Today's Horoscope
Good fortune attends the person who has a birthday on this first day of the New Year. Loss or sorrow through a feminine relative will be followed by substantial gain and happiness during this important busy year. Ambition, originality and perseverance are this person's outstanding characteristics. He or she also has executive ability and charm. The character of the child born on this date will be energetic, ingenious, thoughtful, fond of learning, scientific, very observant and inventive. Success and good fortune are assured, but some love sorrow is threatened.
One-Minute Test Answers
1. The use of warships, generally destroyers, ahead and on the flanks of a fleet at sea to protect it from attack.
2. It generally means housecleaning. It occurs on Friday to be ready for the captain's inspection of his ship on Saturday.
3. The direction and control, by a trained group of personnel, of the gun fire of a ship in order to make it accurate and rapid.

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, January 1
THIS DAY, although the beginning of the "new leaf" and its fragile resolutions, will be notable for a general state of slowing down processes, with perhaps a tendency to retrospect, depression and reactions after the high tension of the previous three days. However, it is this sense of introspection and inertia that can be definitely shaken off, there is promise of stirring up some worthwhile activities and beneficial contacts that may have enduring values. Friendly and domestic sociability survive and give happiness.
If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may look for some substantial opportunities during the year, with certain lively issues, perhaps involving change, travel, new contacts. While not of major importance, these will possess the virtue of stability, endurance and future security. Domestic and home interests probably will feel this sense of soundness, and wise efforts are due for enjoying material rewards.
A child born on this day will have much sturdiness of character, stability and practical talents, which should be sure of recognition and due rewards.

No Refuge from Love

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION JERRY BRONDFIELD

SYNOPSIS
MOLLA GLENDON comes to New York, seeking refuge from the war that has swept across her native Norway, and from the bombs that shattered London, where she had fled from Oslo. She is to work for BURTON WHITWORTH, an old friend of her deceased father. Burton tells her son, TAYLOR WHITWORTH, to bring Molla to the family home for dinner.
YESTERDAY: Tay looks forward with no pleasure to his "task" of meeting Molla.
CHAPTER TWO
TAY WHITWORTH stopped at the office switchboard. "Ring Neil Lundquist, will you, and tell him I'm ready to go to lunch if he is. I'll be in my office."
Five minutes later Neil Lundquist came in. He was tall, powerfully built and blond. There was something ruggedly handsome about him, something rough and shaggy that made one take a second look and find it pleasing. Neil Lundquist was a Whitworth field engineer, and a good one but, as far as he was concerned, he preferred to remain in the field. His trips to New York for consultation were as infrequent as he could possibly make them.
"Where to today?" he asked Tay.
"Something different. Show you a little more of our cosmopolitan big town. Very colorful, too," Tay rattled on. "We're going down to the opera-house skating rink at Rockefeller Plaza. There's a glass-enclosed restaurant there and you can watch folks skate as you eat. You'll like it, and it's only a block from here."
"Say, this is kind of all right," Neil admitted a short while later. "But how can I concentrate on this bouillon royal, or whatever the stuff is, with all those people skimming past? What is this—the floor show?"
Tay laughed. "I enjoy it. I come here a couple of times each week. Ever skate, Neil?"
"Some . . . up in Minnesota," Neil murmured. But he was looking past Tay, out the sweeping glass window which fronted directly on the rink side.
"There," he nodded, "is what I would call a really fine skater."
Directly in front of them, coming out of a graceful spread-eagle, was a girl in a flared blue skirt and a white form-fitting sweater. Her bare legs flashed through a spray of flying ice. Her golden hair, free in the wind, glinted in the sunlight as she completed the maneuver with a short spin.
Tay stared for a full minute as she swept by and continued in a long glide outward toward the center of the ice.
"I've seen them all down here," he said slowly, "but nothing ever like this. She—she's, well, Neil, old man, you can admire her skating, but let me rave about the skater. She's gorgeous—she's—"

He paused. "I've got to meet that girl."
"Sure—just go out and ask her for the next skate," Neil said. It ought to work with your native charm."
"I'm not joking. I've GOT to find out her name. My curiosity is aroused."
"Looks like someone else is beating you to it," Neil observed dryly, nodding again in her direction.
Tay looked. A short, roly-poly man had come out to the rink and approached the girl with the golden hair. They saw the man talk to her for a couple of moments and then take a card out of his wallet. He gave the card to the girl, tipped his hat and walked away.
"I've seen that gent around before," Tay observed, but I'm not sure where. Anyway, he continued, I'm going to stop down here again and again, and maybe again, if necessary, until she shows up. The perseverance kid, that's me."
"And then what?" Neil inquired.
"Why, I'll just go right up to her and ask her what her name is."
"Why don't you do that right now?"
Tay looked surprised. "I never thought of that. Guess I'm not very bright, am I?" He stood up, but when they looked out the girl had gone.
"Someone ought to kick me where a kick usually does the most good," Tay said disgustedly.
"I'd be delighted if you'd just wait until we're through with lunch, or will the opportunity be lost by them?"
"Don't talk about opportunities. One just knocked with a compressed air hammer, but I didn't hear it."
"Say, don't tell me you're looking about for another affair d'amour. I thought you already had your quota for the season."
"Hey, you're crazy," Tay protested. "I haven't—"
"I'll hear up a hand. 'Never mind—I know the routine,' he grinned.
Molla dressed slowly and carefully, yet she wanted to be ready on time. Mr. Whitworth had told her his son would pick her up at 3:30. She looked at her watch. She had an hour.
Would Mr. Whitworth's son be tall, she mused, or short? Would he be light or dark? Would he be handsome or—but of course, he would be handsome. She had noticed that about Americans almost immediately.
Molla peered intently into the mirror as she dabbed powder on her nose. Well, she was part American, too. She was very proud of her father. Her mother, too, of course, but she was glad her father had come from—how did they pronounce it again? Oh, yes—Connecticut. She must remember

Primmer and Dr. C. T. Grattidge. If the weather conditions are agreeable the boys have planned a hike Saturday, at which time some of the new members may take their cooking test.
Gwendlyn Dent was hostess to a euchre party at her home Saturday night.
Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Whisler, Mr. and Mrs. Winifred Dunn, Jane Wolliver, June Armstrong, Dorothy Kholer, Malcolm Shupe, Howard Egan, Mervin McClelland and Hugh Poling.
Dorothy Kholer and Hugh Poling won high score, Mr. and Mrs. Winifred Dunn low score.
Refreshments were served by hostess at a late hour.
The Community Club met Monday night at the home of Tressa Haynes and Della Martin. Officers elected for the year were, President, Zola Chilcote, vice president, Mae Archer; Secretary, Dolly Durant and Treasurer, Emma Armstrong.
They donated $5 to the Red Cross.
Two new members, Mrs. Bertha Egan and Mrs. Kathryn Whisler, joined the society.
Thirteen members and three visitors, Maude Mettler, Frances Stone of Cedar Hill and Stella Wills were present. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.
Miss Virginia Brightwell, local high school teacher, handed her resignation to the Laurelville-Perry Board of Education at its last meeting.
The local board has received one application for position.
Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Wiggins and children, Sammy and Judy, returned home Thursday from Vincennes, Indiana where he had been working for the Anderson Brothers.
Lila Jean Hedges of Columbus returned home Sunday after spending a few days with Dolores Cryder.
Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Stone and daughter Ruth Ellen of Chester

not to sound that second 'C.' Not Con-EC-thee was giving her a French blue wool dress, set off by a garnet clip at the neckline. She hoped they would like it. Her wardrobe was limited. In fact, she had been lucky, as it was, to escape from Norway with as much as she did. No, she wasn't going to worry much about something as unimportant as a dress.
When she was through dressing she sat down and tried to read. She felt nervous, waiting for the people who were giving her a fresh start in life. Over and over again she vowed she would make them like her.
The telephone rang and it startled her. "Hello," she said.
The voice on the other end was pleasant and light. "Hello," it replied. "This is Taylor Whitworth. Are you Molla Glendon?"
"Yes," she said, "and—"
"Well, I'm awfully sorry, but do you mind if I keep you waiting another 20 minutes. I discovered my car had a flat tire when I went to pick it up at the garage. I'll be around as quickly as possible."
"That will be perfectly all right," she said and he hung up.
Anti-climax, she thought. More waiting. More nervousness. Something this wasn't quite fair.
The 20 minutes seemed like an hour, and then the phone rang again.
"I'm down in the lobby," Taylor Whitworth told her. "Coming down or should I come up? Maybe I'd better come up, because how will you recognize who down here? Okay with you? Here I come!"
"Why—why, I'm—"
But he had hung up.
Two minutes later there was the knock at her door.
She opened it and smiled into the face of the tall young man before her.
She held out her hand, slightly hesitant. "I'm Molla," she said, "and I'm sorry to cause you all this trouble."
Tay Whitworth looked at her and blinked. "You—you're Molla?"
He looked at her hand and drew in his breath. He couldn't be mistaken. Molla Glendon was the girl he and Neil had seen skating at Rockefeller Plaza earlier in the day. Wait till Neil sees her, he thought.
"And I said you had two left feet," he mumbled queerly.
She cocked her head quizzically. "What was that?"
"Never mind . . . let's go," he said exultantly. "We've got to start getting acquainted."
"I hope that doesn't take too long," Molla said, and then felt herself blush. "I don't mean that. I mean—"
"I don't care what you mean," he grinned, "but you've got a good idea there. Halalujah, this is my lucky day!"

Elks' New Year's Fete Another Huge Success

100 Couples Take Part In Annual Frolic

Setting aside all cares of a war-torn world, about 100 couples gathered at the Elks' Home, New Year's Eve, and royally welcomed the 'New Year' at one of the most delightful dances of a long series of like annual affairs. A shower of vari-colored balloons from the beautifully draped ceiling of red and green streamers, and a wealth of noisy favors contributed to the gaiety of the dancers as midnight marked the coming of 1942.

Jack McAndrews and his orchestra, a Columbus dance band appearing for the first time in Circleville, provided a diversified program for the dancing from 11 p. m. until 3 a. m.

Unusually beautiful were the striking formal worn by the some-town guests as well as those from a distance, making the affair one long-to-be-remembered for its colorful charm.

Lunch was served in the basement dining room at 2 p. m.

Arrangements for the fine New Year's Eve celebration were in charge of Gerald Hanley, William Crist, George Myers, Carl Drum, Aaron Lumpe and Donald Goeller.

Among the out-of-town dancers were the Misses Laura Flisk, Sis Ehmman, Alice Grace, Vivian Williamson, Bill Grace, Paul Ehmman, Jimmy Mounts, Miss Rita Howell and Mr. and Mrs. William Maugan, Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Patrick and Bobby Fickard, Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. William Weldon, Charleston.

W. Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stump, Athens; Miss Charlene Martin and Lovell Blankenship, Chillicothe; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wolcott, Clintonville; Mr. and Mrs. Evan Phillips, Marion; Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. M. Lousier, Highland Park, Chicago, Ill.; Dr. Thomas, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Hosler, Mt. Sterling; Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Hill, Cambridge; Miss Patty McGinnis, Kingston; Miss Martha Mary Brinker, Ashville; Miss Mary Martha Hamman and Mr. and Mrs. William Dunlap, Williamsport, and Miss Dorothy Moserberger and Bob Hamman of Clarksville.

Dinner Honors Son
Honoring their son, Private Link Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Brown of Madison Township entertained recently at a turkey dinner. Private Brown was home on a five-day furlough from Camp Wheeler, Ga.

Dairy Cookbooklet Features Variety Of Hearty Main-Course Dishes

Creamed shrimp and mushrooms, heaped into noodle nests, make a delicious and filling luncheon dish. Tasty recipes for creamed foods are to be found in the new Dairy Cookbooklet available now.

If your main cooking worry is "What can I give my family that's good—and good for them?" the Dairy book, 18th in our Cookbooklet series, is required reading for you. For instance, take this simple recipe for Cheese and Rice Balls to add the charm of the unexpected to your next meal. The recipe serves 8.

Cheese and Rice Balls
1½ pound aged American cheese
1 cup drained cooked rice
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter

Grate the cheese, add horse-radish and mustard and mix thoroughly. Form into balls about ½ inch in diameter. Combine the rice, egg, salt and butter and mix thoroughly. Pack the rice mixture around the cheese balls so that all cheese is completely covered. Fry a few at a time in hot deep fat (375° F.) until a golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper and serve hot.

Creamy oyster stew, filled frankfurters, and colorful, clever sandwich loaves are other staple menu suggestions. For a real taste sensation try the tang of an old time favorite, the Welsh Rarebit.

Welsh Rarebit
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon salt

Street, the children remaining for a week end visit.

Dairy Cookbooklet Features Variety Of Hearty Main-Course Dishes

Creamed shrimp and mushrooms, heaped into noodle nests, make a delicious and filling luncheon dish. Tasty recipes for creamed foods are to be found in the new Dairy Cookbooklet available now.

If your main cooking worry is "What can I give my family that's good—and good for them?" the Dairy book, 18th in our Cookbooklet series, is required reading for you. For instance, take this simple recipe for Cheese and Rice Balls to add the charm of the unexpected to your next meal. The recipe serves 8.

Cheese and Rice Balls
1/2 pound aged American cheese
4 cups drained cooked rice
1 egg, well beaten
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter
1 tablespoon horseradish
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter

Grate the cheese, add horseradish and mustard and mix thoroughly. Form into balls about 1/2 inch in diameter. Combine the rice, egg, salt and butter and mix thoroughly. Pack the rice mixture around the cheese balls so that all cheese is completely covered. Fry a few at a time in hot deep fat (375° F.) until a golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper and serve hot.

Welsh Rarebit
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt

Here's Roundup Of Bowl Games

DURHAM, N. C., Jan. 1—Nothing could be finer than the state of Carolina turning out for the greatest sports spectacle ever arranged down here in the tobacco belt. Everybody has gone wild.

Today, the Duke eleven, which Coach Wallace Wade says is one of the greatest teams he ever coached, clashed with Oregon State before 56,000 packed row on row in Duke's roaring stadium for the Rose Bowl championship 3,000 miles removed from its home base.

The Blue Devils, as Duke's unbeaten and untied national leaders in ground-gaining are known, were 3 to 1 favorites around here and at least 2 to 1 elsewhere with partisanship removed. But within the last 24 hours there has been a growing tendency to wonder if perhaps the visiting Beavers, making their first appearance in football's Rose Bowl mecca, haven't been slightly underestimated.

Coach Wade tersely said that the team which had managed to get through the holidays in the best physical and mental condition probably would win, and seemed at the same time a little perturbed over his own team's seeming complacency.

Oregon State's Coach Lon Stiner said he had no worries. All week he has worked his men behind locked gates at nearby Chapel Hill, and he said they were as fit and as ready as they will ever be, and are prepared to "maybe use something" especially cooked up for this occasion.

Records Compared

Duke entered the game with a great and shining record against comparatively easy opposition. Oregon State twice was beaten during the season, but played in that very tough Coast Conference where they were No. 1 on the defense and second on the offense as they bowled their way through the stretch to this greatest day in their football history.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1—The darkest shadow on the face of the world—war—and an ominous possibility of rain threatened today to take some of the sweetness out of the eighth annual Sugar Bowl battle at Tulane Stadium for players, promoters and spectators alike.

Because of the war, scattered fears of an air raid, the Army's monopoly on train transportation and the possibility of continued rain there were plenty of tickets being hawked around the city and a crowd of less than 60,000 was expected to watch the men of Fordham and University of Missouri battle in their long awaited holiday classic.

The game has been reported a sell-out for weeks and a crowd of 73,000 promised by the Sugar Bowl committee, but all day yesterday and early this morning the Gulf of Mexico were offering tickets to the highest bidder. Some of them were willing to take as much as a $1.50 off the cost price just to get rid of them.

What was behind all this? We heard several explanations.

An elevator operator in the INS building provided the first tipoff when he asked if we wanted to buy any seats. He had six. Asked why his friends wanted to get rid of them he said: "Some of their wives don't want to go. They have the jitters. They think there might be an air raid or some kind of trouble. I've heard a lot of talk about that lately."

Tickets Available

In the lobby of the St. Charles and Roosevelt Hotels, the city's largest, and at the Sugar Bowl headquarters plenty of tickets were found.

Bell captains were asked if they would like to try to peddle a couple of tickets for us. They reached into their pockets, pulled forth a hand-full and said:

"No sir. Take your pick of these. We're trying to sell them for folks."

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 1—Seven to five favorites, Georgia's Bulldogs pitted an admittedly superior ground attack against Texas Christian's aerial wizardry today in the annual renewal of Miami's New Year's Day football classic.

A crowd of 35,000 was expected to jam the Orange Bowl stadium to watch the southerners attempt to end the Horned Frogs' record of three victories to no defeats in three post-season grid contests.

Eager to make this—their first New Year's Day bowl appearance—a victorious one, Georgia was led by Frank Sinkwich, the lad who played with a broken jaw most of the regular season.

But TCU Coach Dutch Meyer announced he had "six or seven varieties" of defense ready to stop the Georgia wonder. The Texans were at full strength with the return to the lineup of Kyle (Sweet Pea) Gillespie, brilliant tailback.

About This And That In Many Sports

Cage fans will see plenty of action Thursday evening when the Circleville Athletic Club presents another of its big basketball bills starting at 7 o'clock.

For fans who like their cagers young, inexperienced, but willing to mix it up, the first preliminary will be pleasing with the Emer Club, coached by Cuz Dumm, playing the Young Rens from Columbus, a team which has been active in Junior AAU circles. . . . It is expected that the Ren outfit will be comprised of Negro youth, and that should make it all the more interesting. . . . Dumm's boys have been doing well and should knock off another victory tonight.

The second preliminary starts at 8

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 1—Texas A. & M. Southwest Conference champion, sought its third win in three successive New Year's Day football appearances today as it took the field against Alabama in Dallas' Cotton Bowl spectacle.

A drizzling rain and temperatures in the middle 30's on the eve of the classic constituted a potential threat to attendance, but despite reports that some fans were ready to unload tickets, sponsors still hoped for a crowd of 40,000 or better.

The Aggies, planning their strategy around the passing of Derace Moser and Leo Daniels, were ready to match Alabama's powerhouse ground attack with a slashing overhead game. With this in mind, Aggie supporters prayed for a dry gridiron.

One last-minute injury in the A. & M. ranks was that to Bill (Jitterbug) Henderson, the Texans' great pass receiver, who strained a muscle and was not listed in the starting lineup. But even Coach Homer Norton admitted that Bill probably will see action.

Six to five and take your choice was the best betting offer available on the game, but the Crimson Tide was expected to enter the contest a favorite at kickoff-time if it turned up rain. Alabama was handicapped by a leg injury suffered by Fullback Paul Spencer, who was scheduled to see little service.

About This And That In Many Sports

Cage fans will see plenty of action Thursday evening when the Circleville Athletic Club presents another of its big basketball bills starting at 7 o'clock.

For fans who like their cagers young, inexperienced, but willing to mix it up, the first preliminary will be pleasing with the Emer Club, coached by Cuz Dumm, playing the Young Rens from Columbus, a team which has been active in Junior AAU circles. It is expected that the Ren outfit will be comprised of Negro youths and that should make it all the more interesting. Dumm's boys have been doing well and should knock off another victory tonight.

The second preliminary starts at 8 o'clock, and it, too, should be a good one. It is between the Allen Drugs of Chillicothe and the speedy Blue Ribbon Dairymen. The Allens have Creighton Anderson and Art Kaiser, well known Circleville community cagers, in their lineup. The Dairy crew has been showing more strength each time it plays.

Carl Purcell sends his C.A.C. varsity against the Lancaster Red and White in the nine o'clock bout. Stars of several Fairfield County schools make up the Red and White quintet, and the C.A.C. will be forced all the way.

C.A.C. backers are hoping for a large crowd, and from the brand of basketball expected to be shown, many fans should be on hand for the card.

CHICAGO BEARS TUNING UP FOR ALL-STAR GAME

NEW YORK, Jan. 1—The Chicago Bears, champions of the National Pro League for two years running, tuned up today in preparation for their game with the all-stars Sunday at the Polo Grounds.

George Halas, coach of the Bears, conceded by many experts to be the best football team ever to dig a cleat in turf, predicted only defeat for his champions. The pessimistic Halas said:

"It is just about an impossibility to beat such a club as the all-stars have assembled. They seem unbeatable but it will not be any disgrace for us to lose."

"Remember the all-stars have the best players from all the league's nine teams, and any one who has so many linemen and backs of that type and strength just has perfect men to set up a defense against our plays."

Despite Halas' gloomy picture, the Bears were in good shape for the game. They were to work out lightly today and go over their diagrammed plays.

Meanwhile at Garden City, the all-stars under Coach Steve Owen had a stiff workout. Slingin' Sammy Baugh, Cecil Isbell, Frank Filchock and Tuffy Lewis got in a lot of passing practice and a considerable time was given to the booters, Augie Lio, Joe Coomer and Bruiser Kinard.

RED AND BLACK SCHEDULED FOR DRILL AT C. A. C.

Circleville High cagers, idle since school was dismissed before Christmas, will get some practice Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the C. A. C. gymnasium. The Tigers resume action January 9 at Wilmington, against the fast-moving Hurricane team.

The Red and Black has not been able to get going so far this year, winning only two games in six played, London and Grove City falling by the wayside and Lancaster, Greenfield, Upper Arlington and Hillsboro knocking off the victories.

Coach Roy Black has not been able to pick a combination that has clicked to his liking in the several games, and chances are that an entirely different five will be named to start the Hurricane contest.

The next home game will be January 13 when Washington C. H. comes here.

Wilmington has been practicing regularly, getting in three drills last week and several this week.

RICH MINING AREA

JUNEAU, Alaska—Approximately 6,000,000 tons of ore containing about 0.36 percent nickel and 0.27 percent copper are available for mining on Yakobi Island in southeastern Alaska, 130 miles from Juneau. These minerals can be mined and extracted at a cost roughly equal to the value of the metals produced.

These were the principal findings released by two U. S. geologists of the department of the Interior, J. C. Reed and J. Var. N. Dorr, who spent the entire 1940 field season investigating the area.

GENERAL FUND TO FACE HEAVY BURDEN IN CITY

Salaries, Various Other Items Included In Expenses

INCOME IS ESTIMATED

Electric Company's Bill Figured At $3,500; Water At $1,700

Mayor-elect Ben H. Gordon and the new City Council have $3,000 in their general fund to operate the city departments until the first of April.

Miss Lillian Young, city auditor, said Wednesday that accurate figures were not yet available on the anticipated revenue for 1942, but added that no money was expected before April or May when the next tax distribution will be made.

The $3,000 in the general fund will have to pay salaries of police and firemen, water bills and other items paid from the general fund. Since the street lights have been turned off, there will be no light bill to pay, although the city already owes the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Company $3,500. Fire hydrant rental now due totals $1,700, Miss Young said.

Figures compiled by Council several weeks ago show estimated receipts for the new year to total approximately $41,630, which, added to the collections from Berger Hospital approximated at $18,230 and from the library of $11,140, make a grand total in the general fund of $71,000. Most revenue will come from the general tax, $22,408.05. Other estimated receipts are classified tax, $3,250; sales tax, $2,450; cigarette tax, $317.65; inheritance tax, $1,500; liquor tax, $7,000; other permits and licenses, $100; fines, costs and forfeitures, $2,500; health subsidy from state, $1,000; interest, $12.50; sewer permits, $150; miscellaneous, $25; bicycle tags, $169; railroad crossing lights, $438.36; police pension, $160; firemen's pension, $148.80.

Expenditures for the year have been estimated by Council as follows: General Department, $5,563; Fire Department, $8,344; Police Department, $14,145; Health Department, $2,860; Service Department, $17,684.38; police pension, $2,110; firemen's pension, $600; deductions by county auditor for elections, examiners and workmen's compensation, $2,108. Total expenditures, unless cut, will amount to $53,504.38, plus expense of $23,108.30 at the hospital and $10,070.75 at the library, making the grand total of expenses $86,683.43. The figures indicate that without some changes in the 1942 budget, the city will see a deficit of more than $15,000 at the end of the year.

Council met as a committee Tuesday evening to consider the 1942 budget, although it took no official action to make any slashes. Next regular meeting of Council will be January 7.

and early to rise. His day did not begin until ten in the morning. At that hour he awakened and plunged into the task of reading the papers, dictating memos, and seeing intimate advisers.

At one o'clock he ate a tremendous lunch—with champagne. After lunch came a siesta, until four o'clock. After that, he worked furiously until eight. Into that four-hour period he packed more than most people can accomplish in a full eight-hour day.

NEW DRAFT REGISTRATION

The new 18 to 64 draft registration has been tentatively set to start in January. Unlike the original registration, it will not be done in a day.

Because of the tremendous job of handling 24,000,000 men who come under the new law, registration will be extended over a period of weeks and will be by age groups. The 36 to 44 group, subject to military service, will come first.

After them will come those 18 to 21—then those past 44. The latter will be divided into two ten-year groups. Details are now being worked out.

In the first draft, with the aid of 1,000,000 volunteer workers, 17,500,000 men were registered on one day, October 16, 1940. To avoid swamping the 6,500 local draft boards, Selective Service chiefs have now decided to adopt a split-up "R Day" system, extending over a period of weeks.

When the registration has been completed, Selective Service files will contain the names of 42,000,000 men available for military duty.

OPM EFFICIENCY

OPM chiefs are very proud of their latest internal reorganization centralizing control directly in the hands of Directors Knudsen and Hillman.

It is contended that this will eliminate much redtape and speed up administrative processes. However, newsmen have had difficulty fathoming the intricacies of the new set-up and one reporter asked an OPM big-shot to explain its operation.

"Well, under the new system," said the official, "all industrial branch chiefs report direct to Knudsen-Hillman instead of to their division chiefs as was previously done."

"What happens if Knudsen-Hillman can't decide what should be done?"

"Oh," said the reporter, by this time more confused than ever. "Instead of the branch chief consulting his division chief before seeing Knudsen-Hillman, he now sees them first and they call in the division chief."

"That's right. See the amount of time saved?"

"No, I don't," said the newsmen. "And neither do you."

Because of the tremendous job of handling 24,000,000 men who come under the new law, registration will be extended over a period of weeks and will be by age groups. The 36 to 44 group, subject to military service, will come first.

After them will come those 18 to 21—then those past 44. The latter will be divided into two ten-year groups. Details are now being worked out.

In the first draft, with the aid of 1,000,000 volunteer workers, 17,500,000 men were registered on one day, October 16, 1940. To avoid swamping the 6,500 local draft boards, Selective Service chiefs have now decided to adopt a split-up "R Day" system, extending over a period of weeks.

When the registration has been completed, Selective Service files will contain the names of 42,000,000 men available for military duty.

OPM EFFICIENCY

OPM chiefs are very proud of their latest internal reorganization centralizing control directly in the hands of Directors Knudsen and Hillman.

It is contended that this will eliminate much redtape and speed up administrative processes. However, newsmen have had difficulty fathoming the intricacies of the new set-up and one reporter asked an OPM big-shot to explain its operation.

"Well, under the new system," said the official, "all industrial branch chiefs report direct to Knudsen-Hillman instead of to their division chiefs as was previously done."

"What happens if Knudsen-Hillman can't decide what should be done?"

"They call in the division chief," "Oh," said the reporter, by this time more confused than ever. "Instead of the branch chief consulting his division chief before seeing Knudsen-Hillman, he now sees them first and they call in the division chief."

"That's right. See the amount of time saved?"

"No, I don't," said the newsmen. "And neither do you."

CAPITAL CHAFF

Keep an eye on Admiral William A. Glassford, commander of the old China Patrol, to be the next head of the Asiatic Fleet, succeeding Admiral Thomas Hart. Hart now 65 and beyond retirement age, is ready to step down whenever the Navy can pick a younger man to take over. . . . Admiral Glassford is the brother of Arizona's Brigadier General "Happy" Glassford, former head of the Washington, D. C., police, who became famous for befriending the Bonus Army during the Hoover Administration. . . . Many of The A. F. of L. workers who fought side by side with the Marines on Wake Island are veterans of Mr. Ickes' PWA projects at Bonneville and Grand Coulee. Before the attack, they spent their spare hours drilling shoulder to shoulder with the Marines.

Saltcreek Valley

Miss Velma Boyer of Detroit, Mich., spent her holiday vacation at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Boyer of Tarleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fraunfelder of Stringtown entertained at their home last Sunday to a turkey dinner for Mrs. Ruth Eichelstein of Rushville and Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Strous. Mrs. Eichelstein will remain for the week.

Mrs. Sarah Reichelderfer was the guest of Mrs. Stella Thomas of Tarleton last Sunday.

Private John Reichelderfer of Maryland spent last week at home with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Reichelderfer.

Mrs. Jennie Strous and son Pearl entertained to a goose dinner.
